A very dry water. Mineral with fine bubbles and a mellow lemon on the back of the tongue. Long subtle zinging loose change flavor on the front side of the tongue following. Almost like I licked a battery and got burnt. Salt. More metal like festive tinsel on a tree, frill, fun and free with a holiday spicity but not haughty. The spirit of the middle class Europeans, grandparents and a generation who once played in rubble in their war torn country and now who demanding nice homes. A good table water. Might be too zippy for Long Island oyster but not enough acid to cut through the fat of a fried steak. Would go great with mussels and fries. Sweet can of ocean meat like tuna or a tuna salad with crackers would compliment well. Also, I imagine, corn chowder.
